A Million Dollar Mistake

There is a story told about a man pulling away from the drive-thru window at a bank in dismay. The teller had not greeted him or expressed thanks as he completed his transaction. He says that even though he did not deposit much money, he was still from the old school that believed you give the customer special attention.

It reminds me of Jon Barrier who pulled his old pickup truck into the U.S. Bank of Washington parking lot one day in Spokane, WA. Dressed in his usual shabby clothes, he paid a quick visit to his broker, who was located in the bank building, and went back out to his truck. The parking lot attendant informed Barrier that a new 60-cent parking fee had just been instituted, but that the parking was free if he could get his ticket validated by someone in the bank. Now, Barrier had been a customer there for several years, so he ran back inside to get his ticket stamped.

Inside, the teller took one look at Barrier's grubby clothes, made an assumption, and refused to stamp his ticket. She said the bank could only validate tickets when customers made a transaction. After being directed to a fairly new vice president, Barrier was basically told the same thing.

"Fine," Barrier said, "I'll make a transaction!" He then proceeded to withdraw all his money—slightly more than a million dollars—and took it to a bank a block away. That is, after he got his parking ticket stamped!

The Hebrew writer says, "Do not forget to entertain strangers, for by so doing some have unwittingly entertained angels" (Heb. 13:2).

Nearly every time the church assembles, visitors are present. How do we receive them? How do we show respect for some and not for others? Remember, "What shall it profit a man if he gains the whole world and loses his own soul?"
